Developing and Sustaining Highly Collaborative Leadership Teams

Individually, we are one drop. Together, we are an ocean

-- Ryunosuke Satoro

Objectives Part 1

- Defining what collaboration is and isn’t
- Identifying personal emotional intelligence competencies that contribute to highly collaborative teams
- Identifying structural and interpersonal factors that are critical for building and sustaining highly collaborative teams
- Applying team development frameworks to a current leadership team and determine ways to enhance collaboration
Objectives Part 2

- How to build a group that looks at the whole picture for the association rather than as an individual
- How do we get others to “drink the leadership juice” rather than feeling like we are coercing our friends/members to run for a position when an office becomes open?
- What tele-meeting programs have you used successfully during board meetings for leadership team members who have distance barriers for attending live meetings?

Why Collaboration?

Collaborative service delivery...is considered a transdisciplinary approach because it represents an attempt to overcome the boundaries of individual disciplines ... no one person or profession has an adequate knowledge base or sufficient expertise to execute all the functions .... associated with providing educational services for students.

A Model for Collaborative Service Delivery for Students With Language-Learning Disorders in the Public Schools

Collaboration Defined

Working together to create value while sharing virtual and physical space

Evan Rosen, The Culture of Collaboration

Highly diversified teams working together inside and outside a company with the purpose to create value by improving innovation, customer relationships and efficiency while leveraging technology for effective interactions in the virtual and physical space.

Carlos Dominguez, Cisco Systems
The Case for Collaboration

Why is it important for State Associations to focus on building and sustaining a collaborative leadership team?

What is happening in your Association that drives the need for collaborative solutions?
